VON HINDENBURG RENEWS EFFORT TO CUT WAY THROUGH TO CITY OF WARSAW

Retreating Turks Are Cut Down in Large Numbers Following Defeat at Hands of Russians—Desperate Fighting in Passes of Carpathians.

By Associated Press.
London, Feb. 1.—Once again British interest in the military activities on the continent has been overshadowed by the fact that Germany has brought the combat to Europe's front door.
What is regarded here as the new German policy of a submarine blockade of British ports is temporarily effective at least in the case of Belgium, where sailing has been suspended.
The Liverpool authorities announced that no interference of the trade of that port is expected. The two British merchant steamers torpedoed by the Germans off Harve, are the largest commercial vessels that have yet fallen victims to German submarines. The three ships sunk in the Irish sea were small ones.
The belief expressed yesterday that submarine raiders could not remain more than a few hours in waters so removed from a base, has been exploded by the news that the mail steamer Leinster, encountered a German submarine off Dublin on Sunday. Six hours after the sinking of the 3,000-toner. Therefore it would seem probable that the raider renewed his supplies from the coaster, Linda Blanche, before sending her to the bottom.
Reports of Russian operations over the vast area continue to come from the west. The Russian occupation of Tabriz, in Persia, has been confirmed, and the Russian army which ousted the Turks out of this provincial capital of Persia, after their stay there, is sweeping to the south and to the west on the heels of the retreating Turks.
In the Carpathians, sharp battles have been fought in the forests, where the Russians are striving to maintain command of the passes which keep the way open behind them.
Berlin says the situation in all parts of the Carpathians is favorable. Vienna reports the resumption of hostilities in Eastern Serbia, following a period of quiet.

FRENCH LOSE TORPEDO BOAT

Berlin via wireless, Feb. 1.—Reports to the Overseas News Agency from Paris, say that the French torpedo boat 219, has been sunk off Nieuport, Belgium. It is reported also through the same source that German aeroplanes have succeeded in throwing some bombs on Baillieu, 9 miles east of Hazebrouk, and near the Belgian frontier.

ACCUSED MUST ANSWER TO THE U. S. GOVERNMENT

By Associated Press.
Indianapolis, Ind., Feb. 1.—Holding that the Federal government has jurisdiction over election machinery, Judge A. B. Anderson, in the United States District court here today, overruled the demurrer filed by Donn M. Roberts, mayor of Terre Haute, and 26 others, to the indictment charging them with conspiracy to corrupt the election of November 3rd, 1914, in Terre Haute.
March 8th was the date fixed for the trial after the 27 had been arraigned and all pleaded not guilty.
The defense asked for March 8th at the request of Representative A. O. Stanley, of Kentucky, chief counsel, who did not want to begin trial until after the adjournment of Congress on March 4th.

SMALLPOX IS DISCOVERED IN UPPER FAYETTE

Smallpox has broken out in the Conner School House neighborhood, in Jefferson township, and all pupils and teachers of the Conner school are quarantined as well as all persons exposed.
Dr. Loring Brock reports cases, after 21 days' exposure, in the families of Henry Mossman, on the Inskeep farm, of Mr. Wood, on the Saum's farm and Mr. Bennett, on the Frank L. Parrett farm. It is said that the Bennett family have been visiting the Christian Union church in this city.
Since these cases were discovered Dr. Wilson, of Jeffersonville, has also reported cases.
Investigations made by Dr. Brock indicate that the disease was brought here by two children who were sent here from Indiana to avoid being vaccinated, their father contracting the disease soon after their departure.
In Indiana schools, as in Ohio schools, pupils and teachers are not allowed in school unless vaccinated, and their children were sent to the Brakefield home in the Conner school neighborhood in order to escape vaccination.
The authorities will exercise a rigid quarantine and no children will be allowed to return to school unless vaccinated.

SENATE FIGHT IS RESUMED

By Associated Press.
Washington, Feb. 1.—With prospect of a continuous grind until one side gives way, the Senate fight over the Administration Shipping bill, proceeded today with the Republicans still talking against time to stave off a roll call.
Senators of both sides flocked to the capitol when hostilities were resumed after Sunday's truce, prepared to stay in or near the Senate chamber, night and day until the endurance of one side is crushed.
As the day wore on with Sen. Smith still holding the floor, the sergeant-at-arms and his deputies rounded up absentees and 89 Senators assembled, the largest number present at any time during this session.
Late in the day Senator Smith switched to a discussion of the ship-

INDIAN TROOPS FIGHTING FOR ENGLAND.

A great deal of interest is centered on the result of tonight's session of the city council, owing to the important matters which will confront that body.
One of the problems is how to cut down expenses in various city departments, and it is rumored that unless additional funds are provided, there will be a lay-off in the Fire department, the Police department, and in the Service department.
It is claimed that a general lack of funds was encountered by the Budget commission in preparing the usual material for council's action, and that extreme economy must be practiced to bridge over the gap until enough funds are available.
This will be taken up at tonight's session, it is understood. A cut in the service department may result in no street-cleaning for sometime, regardless of the constant demand for such work.

BRILLIANT PROGRAM TERMINATES SERIES

The last of the series of the Senior recitals was given by Miss Martha McCoy on Saturday afternoon at Conservatory hall.
Miss McCoy's rendition of the Chopin Polonaise was exceedingly brilliant. Other selections were from Bach, Kullak, Beethoven and Clementi. Miss McCoy has a good clear execution and fine expressional powers.
Miss Helen McCoy assisted in readings. She was heard in a Phillip's monologue and two lyrics of musical background. A fine enunciation, voice of excellent tone quality and an easy stage presence, characterized Miss Helen's readings.
Miss Margaret Schneider contributed a charming piano solo to the program.
All of the young ladies are members of the class of 1915.

The dead are: Frank Henderson, of Bethel, O., Frank Smith, Amelia, and — Hoover.
The accident occurred during a dense fog, on a straight track, one mile in length. The traction car was running east and the freight west. Both trains were going at high speed, and they came together with a resounding crash, the former being completely wrecked and scattered into a nearby field.

CONGRESS ASKS FOR INFORMATION

Shipping Bill and Its Bearing Upon Foreign Relations.

BRYAN MAY ISSUE STATEMENT

Allies Would Promptly Seize Any Vessels of the Proposed Government Line Which Were Formerly Under the German and Austrian Flags. Interesting and Exciting Week Ahead For the Senate.

Washington, Feb. 1.—The situation in regard to the ship purchase bill, especially its bearing upon foreign relations, has now reached a point where, it is said, the administration may soon be obliged to make some statement on the subject.

Secretary of State Bryan, who received the British communication making it clear that Great Britain would regard purchase and operation of the interned belligerent ships by the United States as an unneutral act, arrived in Washington from the south, but declined to make any comment on the disclosures during his absence.

It became known that pressure will be brought to bear upon the administration from congress with a view to a clearing up of the government's intentions regarding the purchase of ships under the proposed legislation and the attitude of Great Britain and the allied governments. It has now been established that the British government, in response to Mr. Bryan's request, made it clear that it would regard as an unneutral act the release by the United States of the interned German and Austrian ships; also that the French admiralty rules, now in effect, require the seizure of all such vessels, and that the views of Russia are in accord with those of France.

There is, therefore, no room for doubt that any vessels of the proposed government lines which were formerly under the Austrian or German flags will promptly be seized by either the French or British if they take to the seas. Therefore, the only course left open to the administration, in case the ship bill is passed, seems to be the purchase of ships of other neutrals, like Norway, Sweden, Denmark, Holland and Italy. But these vessels, it is pointed out, already are in the carrying trade between the United States and Europe, and their purchase would not add to the available tonnage for relieving the freight congestion.

To carry contraband of war, such as foodstuffs, or horses, to England and France in a government owned ship, would at once give Germany the right to charge the United States government with committing an unneutral and even an unfriendly act.

Robert Lansing, the present counselor of the state department, discussed this phase of the matter before a subcommittee of the house naval committee some time ago.

An interesting and exciting week is ahead for the senate. When that body met today it was with the determination on the part of the senate Democratic leaders to hold the senate in continuous session until the ship bill is passed. The president's friends and supporters in the senate hope to achieve this result before adjournment Saturday night. There will be no closure resorted to, from present advices. The southern Democrats as a rule are opposed to it. The Republicans are far from having exhausted their resources of oratory. Senator Burton and others among the noted debaters are prepared to talk at length.

SHIPS ARE SUNK IN IRISH SEA

Three British Vessels Destroyed by German Submarine.

London, Feb. 1.—The skipper of the British steamship Cruachan, one of the merchant vessels sunk by the German submarine U-21 in the Irish sea, says that the submarine appeared about 10 o'clock in the morning and ordered him and his crew to leave their vessel within ten minutes. The crew had hardly got away, he says, when a torpedo hit the vessel. The Cruachan sank five minutes later. The crew, who had taken to small boats, were rescued and taken to Fleetwood. The steamship Linda Blanche, from Manchester for Belfast, met a similar fate. The identity of the third steamer reported sunk by the German submarine has not been ascertained.

In addition a German submarine also has torpedoed two British steamers in the English channel near Havre—the Tokomaru and the Icaria.

DECLARE THE BULL MOOSE IN RUNNING

Future of Party Discussed By Progressive Leaders.

New York, Feb. 1.—What is to become of the Progressive party? This is a problem that is interesting the leaders of the two older parties as well as the Bull Moose chiefs. Whether the party is alive or dead, the Progressive vote is admitted to be one of the most vital issues in the 1916 presidential election.

The question is being discussed all over the country. Republicans and Democrats are saying that many of the votes that were cast for Theodore Roosevelt in the last presidential election will be cast next year for a Democrat or Republican.

Charles Sumner Bird, United States Senator Clapp, Medill McCormick, Charles J. Bonaparte, Senator Poinexter and other Progressive leaders have submitted their views on the situation.

The consensus of opinion from these is that unless one of the old parties comes around to the constructive principles of the Progressive party, the Bull Moose will be in the field in 1916 with a national ticket.

The Progressive movement is bound to go on, it is believed by its leaders, whether or not the rank and file vote a Republican or Democratic ticket. It is admitted by some that there will have to be a radical change in the Republican policies before there will be any material amount of desertions to the party from the Progressive ranks. Recent legislation put through by President Wilson and the Democratic congress, it is said, will prevent any kind of a union with or between the Progressives as a body and the Democratic party.

Mrs. Ollie Dupoy Sible, thirty-two, who conducted the apartment, was injured. Mrs. Sible rejected the attentions of Smith, who accused Miss Williams of using her influence to turn his sweetheart against him. Smith killed Miss Williams with the charge from a shotgun, fired a thirty-eight caliber revolver at the woman he loved and then turned the pistol on himself.

RUSS CLAIM TO HAVE MADE BIG GAINS

Great Conflict Developing In the Carpathians.

TEUTONS ASSUME OFFENSIVE

Russians Advancing In East Prussia While the Germans Continue Their Attacks on the Czar's Positions In Central Poland—Operations In the Eastern and Western Theaters of Hostilities.

London, Feb. 1.—For the fourth time since the commencement of the war the Carpathian mountains between Dukla and Wyszok passes are the scene of a pitched battle.

The previous battles were between Russians and Austro-Hungarians, but in that which is now developing the Austrians and Hungarians have the assistance of the German armies and are assuming a vigorous offensive.

Despite this, the Russian reports assert that the preliminary fighting has turned to the advantage of Russians and that prisoners and guns have been captured.

On the Carpathian front, the Austrians having concentrated their contingents from some of the adjoining sections and from other fronts, have attempted to deliver an offensive through the valley of the lower San and the roads leading across the passes to Sambor and Stry. During the twenty-eighth and twenty-ninth battles in the Carpathians results were favorable to the Russians in several sections of the front. During these two days Russians took 35 officers and 2,500 soldiers prisoners, captured two rapid fire guns and one cannon.

Simultaneously the Austro-Germans are concentrating armies in the mountains between Bukovina and Transylvania to prevent an attempt by the Russians to outflank them, and on the Roumanian and Serbian frontiers, to check any effort of the armies of those countries to take a hand in the fighting, upon the result of which Austria stakes so much.

In the West. The Russians also are pushing their offensive in East Prussia, while the Germans continue their attack on the Russian positions in central Poland. These operations, however, are secondary to the battle in the Carpathians.

Except in the neighborhood of La Bassee and in the Argonne, where the Germans have resumed their attack, artillery has been the only arm engaged on the western front. The Germans again claim to have captured some trenches near La Bassee, while the French say that the British have reoccupied all the ground which had been temporarily lost.

At that place the official British eye witness, in a description of the battle of Jan. 25, says that after some of the most desperate hand-to-hand and fist fighting of the war, the Germans were driven out and suffered severe losses.

Notwithstanding this, it is evident that the Germans are still set on breaking through the lines which guard the French coast ports, as dispatches, coming by way of Holland, say they are gathering another fresh army for an attack on the Yser line. The Russians have inflicted another defeat on the Turks in the Sari-Kamsh region, where, during a snowstorm, they crossed a mountain and after heavy fighting captured the commanding general and his staff of the Thirtieth Turkish division and a large quantity of war material.

STEAMER DACIA SAILS

Galveston, Tex., Feb. 1.—The steamship Dacia departed from Galveston for Rotterdam with 11,000 bales of cotton to be transhipped to Bremen. Telegraphic orders to get under way were received by Captain George McDonald from E. N. Breiting of New York, the owner. In two hours the vessel had taken on a pilot and was outside of the harbor.

Seizure of the steamer is expected to result in prize court proceedings and diplomatic representations that may be of far-reaching importance. Comment on the Dacia incident in the British press has been extensive.

GERMANS DELIVER FIERCE ATTACKS

Paris, Feb. 1.—The determined German effort to break through the French lines in the Argonne and get within striking distance of the fortress of Verdun, which resulted in a French reverse on Friday, continues. Three separate attacks were made by the Germans in the woods of La Grurie, near Fontain Madam, on the new positions which the French established 200 meters behind their former trenches, following Friday's check. These new attacks were all repulsed. According to the latest official communique.

ADDITIONAL PRECAUTIONS

Paris, Feb. 1.—Further instructions regarding the diminishing of illumination in case of an attack by Zeppelins are contained in an official note issued by the military authorities. The note remarks that the lessening of lighting already effected has made it more difficult to determine the location of Paris and special points at which it might be desired to direct airship fire. "A bridge of trumpeters will sound 'on guard' as soon as the arrival of Zeppelins is reported," the note continues.

An Old Time Filibuster

It has been a long time—not as long as it should have been, however—since the people of this country have been compelled to read and hear about a filibuster performance in the United States Senate. Indeed, it has been such a long time since one of the "talk fests" was staged in the Senate that folks had begun to hope that the undignified and always childish custom had been abandoned for all time.

Just as this hope was beginning to give bright promise of realization the old malady seized upon the Republican brethren in the Senate and they talked so long and so loud and gave such unmistakable evidence of their physical powers that the best Democratic Senators could do was to agree on a truce and suspension of the oratorical bombardment during Sunday.

The administration's ship purchase bill was the cause of trouble. While many Democratic Senators were not enthusiastic in their support of the bill they had agreed to vote for it as a matter of party discipline and party regularity.

The Republican Senators thereupon concluded to resort to the old-fashioned filibuster and talk the bill to death. Senator Reed Smoot, of Utah, was the chief offender, speaking for nearly twelve hours continuously.

There is no merit in such tactics and the United States Senate should be above resorting to them. True, there is another political custom which is equally bad and that is for Senators and representatives in Congress to vote for a measure just because party regularity requires it. If they do not favor the proposed measure they should vote against it regardless of the effect on their political standing. There is in both nation and state too much tendency to enact and to repeal legislation because of the political effect which will follow.

There is no reason why a good law enacted by a Republican legislature or congress should not be permitted to remain by the successors of the opposite political faith and vice versa. Neither is there any reason why a good proposal by a Democratic chief executive should not have the support of Republican legislators or that one which is not believed sound should not be opposed by legislators even of the same political faith as the executive who submits the proposal.

Filibuster tactics are childish, but not more so than the custom of sticking to party "regardless".

So long as the narrow-minded partizanship exists among legislators—men who should actually as they are presumed to theoretically rise above it—we may expect to have it checked by the childish plan of filibustering.

It was the duty of Senators and Representatives in Congress to stand up and vote for or against the proposed ship purchase bill, as their best and honest judgment dictated was for the best interests of the country, paying no heed to party regularity or party custom.

Every incoming legislature and congress seems to be possessed of the idea that all the work of the preceding body must be undone, no matter whether the work was good or bad, if the succeeding legislative body was composed of members who held a different political faith.

We are facing that very condition in Ohio now. The present legislature seems to be laboring under the impression that it is in duty bound to tear down all the work of the preceding assembly regardless of the fact that most of that work resulted from the adoption by the people of a new constitution.

The chaotic condition which is bound to follow among the people of Ohio if such a plan is carried out, will prove too late the mistake of such a course, even if party precedent is adhered to.

There are some level-headed men in the present state administration who are aware of the folly of such a course and now and have been holding back some of the new members who are anxious to gain fame by doing or undoing something.

Disposition to Save a Promising Sign of Business Improvement

By IVY L. LEE, Member of John D. Rockefeller's Staff

There is no question that the United States occupies the most favorable position of any great nation of the world in the situation. And any one can thank God that he is an American citizen. Not only are we blessed with freedom from participation in the war, but in progress in meeting the abnormal problems presented.

Not long ago we learned that the value of our farm products last year was ten billion dollars. This is amazing, but more so when we think of the fact that THE MOST FASHIONABLE THING IN THE UNITED STATES AT THE PRESENT TIME IS ECONOMY, AND WE ARE BASING OUR HOPES FOR THE FUTURE ON THIS DISPOSITION TO SAVE.

Our federal reserve system unlocks a tremendous amount of gold which had been tied up and restricted from use, and we have at last a sound banking system.

THINK OF IT! WE HAVE ONE-EIGHTH OF THE WORLD'S GOLD IN OUR COUNTRY, YET OUR BUSINESS AND OUR CREDITS DO NOT BEGIN TO APPROACH ONE-EIGHTH OF THE WORLD'S TOTAL.

One of the most valuable results of the war has been in clearing our process of thinking and bringing us back to the fundamental principles. People began to think straight and on old fashioned substantial lines.

Poetry For Today

THE WRECK OF THRONES.

Almighty God, author of the universal plan,
Didst thou not, in thy image, create aspiring man?
Made "a little lower than the angels"
by thy hand,
And the dumb creatures of land and sea
to command,
Endowed with good judgment, intelligence and reason
To frown on evil passions, sedition
and treason,
Awakened into being for good and noble deeds
Rather than to wrangle over isms, dogmas, creeds.
Destined to combat evil and glorify
thy name,
And shun the abysmal depths of everlasting shame.
Then why should nations plunge into bitter war and strife,
Making widows and orphans by the loss of human life
Why do men lose their reason and play the role of beast, Murdering their fellowmen in the war-cursed east?
Oh, Ruler of the Universe, we earnestly pray
The heavy hand of war—the tyrant—monster stay,
Cutting short the lives of the bravest,
noble and true,
Turning back civilization a century
or two.
Spreading gaunt famine, destruction
and destitution,
Causing havoc and ruin beyond restitution.
If red war must continue in its severity,
May the wrecks of empires be crowned with sweet liberty.

Bits of Byplay

Betha!

This world we could improve, I say,
Our progress would be ample,
If we had less advice each day
And much more good example.

A Wonder.

Gabe—Jones is the most truthful man I know of.
Steve—Why do you say that?
Gabe—He had a black eye last week, and I asked him how he got it, and he told me that a man hit him.

The Silver Lining.

These days are cold, but do not pout.
Of this fact make a note:
You never hear a thing about
The man who rocks the boat.

The Wise Fool.

"Politeness costs nothing," remarked the sage.
"Maybe that's the reason why most people have no use for it," added the fool.

Huh!

"It is a funny thing," said Bill
To his friend, Mr. Numan;
"The man who's wearing ear muffs will Imagine he looks human."

Fairy Tales.

"Pleased to meet you."
"I had to work late."
"I can take a drink or let it alone."
"My, isn't your baby pretty?"
"We have never had a quarrel since we were married."

Sure.

"It may seem queer," said Mr. Burke.
"But you can bet it's so;
An idle rumor does more work
Than anything I know."

Placing the Credit.

Luke wrote the following paragraph some years ago, and it appeared in his column. Since then it has been going the rounds credited to almost every publication in the country. Here it is:
"One morning father missed some money out of his clothes and thought mother had frisked him during the night. So, while mother was busy in another room, father went through her hand bag in search of his coin. He found a receipted milk bill, an unpaid ice bill, a big hunk of prepared chalk, a powder puff, two coupons six months old, representing the last time he had taken her to the theater; a button hook, six samples of dress goods, a clipping containing Gene Field's "Little Boy Blue," a sample of talcum powder, one of the baby's mittens, an old tintype of himself taken before marriage and 7 cents in coin. And father felt so mean that he kicked himself all day."

Things to Worry About.

Daily Health Hint.

Never stand behind a mule when you are arguing with him.

Our Daily Special.

Be a good loser, but don't make it a habit.

Luke McLuke Says:

You can make a woman madder by ignoring her than you can by calling her names.

When a girl marries she usually loses a good friend and gets a grouchy boarder.

Politics is one of our most popular sports because you can talk it all day and not know a blame thing about it.

When they are engaged they imagine that they can get along with one chair when they go to housekeeping. But after they have been married for awhile they want two different parlor suits.

The lad who loafs around and owes everybody in town is the same fellow who is deeply worried because the Panama canal isn't paying expenses.

The old fashioned poker player who used to walk around his chair to change his luck now has a son who can deal a diamond from the bottom when his stack gets low.

Before he gets her he thinks she is a hummingbird. After he gets her he discovers that she is a screech owl.

Conscience may help some. But the fear of getting caught is what keeps most of us straight.

A woman may have no aim in life but she always seems to hit the target when she starts out to shoot Friend Husband.

There isn't any fun in fishing if you have to catch fish for a living.

Before she gets him she believes all he tells her about his prowess as an athlete. After she gets him she discovers that about the only sport he excels in is throwing the ball.

Once in awhile father will play fox when he comes home with a fine bun on, and he will carefully hide his money so mother won't find it. And then he will get up with a big head and a dazed feeling and stall around for an hour trying to remember where he hid the blame money.

The first baby gets a silver mug, a gold ring, an ivory rattle and about $200 worth of fine baby clothes. But the sixth baby is lucky if it gets two bibs and a ten cent box of corn-starch.

CRAZED BY REVERSES

New York, Feb. 1.—Crazed by business reverses, Herman Auerbach, a wealthy real estate man, shot and killed his wife, thirty-four, and his two daughters, Bertrice, eighteen, and Daisy, sixteen, and then committed suicide, in the family home at 386 Central Park west. The bodies, each shot through the head, rested in their different beds. Apparently the three women were killed as they slept. It is the theory of the police that the man arose after making sure that the family were asleep and, taking his rifle, slew his wife and daughters.

WATCHING ALL STREAMS

Columbus, Feb. 1.—J. Warren Smith, local forecaster, sent out telegrams to all river observers in the state, warning them that the situation was critical and asking them to keep a close watch in their respective territories and advise Columbus at once of any rise in streams. The elements of danger were the fact that the ground is frozen and water can not soak in, but must run off directly; that there is the equivalent of more than an inch of rain in the unmelted snow and ice upon the surface, and that the rivers are covered with considerable sheet ice, several inches thick. The ice is a'most certain to go out today.

BODY FOUND IN SNOWDRIFT AFTER ELEVEN LONG DAYS

Jason Justice, of Near Bloomington, Finds Frozen Body of Brother in Snow-drift at Roadside.

NEARLY EMPTY WHISKEY
BOTTLE TELLS GRIM TALE.

Thomas P. Justice, of Lawrence County, Ky., Perishes Miserably in Blizzard on Night of January 20th, and Body Is Not Discovered Until Yesterday.

After remaining covered over in a snow drift for eleven days, following death in a blizzard on the night of January 20th, the body of Thomas P. Justice, aged 24 years, of Lawrence county, Ky., was found in the ditch by the roadside near the residence of William Parker on the Bloomington and Midway pike, Sunday afternoon.

The gruesome discovery was made by the dead man's brother, Jason Justice, who resides on the C. T. Lynch farm, about 200 yards from the point where the young man had perished. When found only one leg was visible above the snow, and it was necessary to dig the remains from the ice and snow where it had reposed for so many days—almost within a stone's throw of the brother's home, where he would have found warmth and shelter from the blizzard in which he perished.

Death evidently had resulted while the man was intoxicated, as a nearly empty whiskey bottle was in his pocket, bearing mute evidence as to why the unfortunate man had fallen by the roadside and perished miserably.

Thomas Justice left his home in Lawrence county, Kentucky, on Tuesday, January 19th, with the intention of visiting his brother, Jason Justice.

He arrived in Bloomington Wednesday evening, January 20th, made inquiries concerning the whereabouts of his brother's home, and started out to walk the three and one-half miles. A blizzard was raging at the time, and outside of hearing him shouting as he trudged through the storm, nothing more was heard of the man, other than the finding of a suitcase in the road at the point where he had evidently staggered into the ditch and fallen.

The suitcase was found on the following morning, nearly covered with snow. It contained articles bearing the name of Ernest Justice, and it was a day or two before the suitcase was claimed by the brother.

A letter then was written to the man's parents asking what had become of him, as he had not reached the home of his brother. After some delay a reply was received by Jason Justice, stating that the young man had left home at the time above mentioned, and nothing had been heard from him since that time.

The brother then instituted a search, but could find no trace of the man until late Sunday evening, when the melted snow revealed a leg half protruding from the snow in the ditch at the roadside. This was on the east side of the road, some 50 yards north of the Wm. Parker residence.

NO BIG BOOST IN PRICE OF BREAD IN THIS CITY

Some Changes Made Due to the High Price of Wheat and Flour, but the Above Five Cent Loaf is Not Yet on the Market—Six or Seven Cent Loaf May Come Soon.

Washington people have manifested no little concern over the reported forthcoming raise in the five-cent loaf of bread to 10 cents on account of the European war and the resultant upturn of prices in the wheat market.

To allay this apprehension in a measure comes the firmly declared conviction from local men acquainted with the wheat and flour situation that this shall never come about.

True, they declare, there is a scarcity of wheat, an unprecedented scarcity in fact, and all eyes have been drawn to the answer of President Wilson to the recent petition of American bakers for an embargo on wheat.

It is thought probable that the wheat market may necessitate, locally, the introduction of the 6c or 7c loaf and the temporary abolition of the 5 cent loaf. The change is expected soon.

With wheat above $1.50 and still soaring and flour selling above $8 per barrel, the Chicago bakers are marketing a 6 cent loaf, which takes the place of the five center. The five cent loaf has bid an at least temporary farewell in many communities.

But for the present, Washington is assured by local bakers of a continuation of the five cent loaf for as long a time as is possible. An agreement has been effected between local bakers and grocers to that effect, eliminating, however, the reduction usually allowed when certain quantities are purchased. Loaves will be five cents straight—no six for a quarter condition. And bread will wholesale at four cents the loaf, straight.

This system will be employed just as long as possible, but the wild condition of the wheat market makes it impossible to come to any definite scale.

OBJECTION IS RAISED TO CHANGING SCHOOL DISTRICT

Many Residents of Oswald School District Meet County Board of Education and Discuss Enlargement of Bloomington School District Which Makes Some Radical Changes.

More than thirty persons, residents of Oswald school district in Marion township, were present Saturday afternoon at a special meeting of the County Board of Education to file objections to their school district being annexed to the school district of Bloomington.

The meeting was held in the office of County Supt. Frank M. Allen in the court house and was attended by all members of the county board.

No definite conclusion was reached with regard to the matter and it is possible that another special meeting will be called soon with a view to reaching a conclusion. If not the matter will be taken up again at the regular meeting of the board, February 23.

The objections of the Marion township people are the outgrowth of an action taken by the Board of Education last fall after considerable urging from various sources. The action of the board was to incorporate into the Bloomington school district seven contiguous districts for school purposes. The action made it possible for the children in these districts to attend the Bloomington school, which were believed by the agitators to offer better scholastic advantages, without the cost of tuition.

The new order was enforced and it is said that not until Saturday was any objection raised. It would appear that the chief contention of the Marion township people is that under the new order they are required to pay taxes in the Bloomington school district.

Persons familiar with the subject state that the taxes assessed to the individual are much smaller than tuition would be. It is asserted also that many of the children from these adjacent districts are and have been attending the Bloomington schools and paying tuition right along, including children of the Oswald school district. Superintendent Allen stated that on visiting the Oswald school one day last week he was surprised to find not a pupil in attendance.

It is stated that persons in others of the seven districts have objections to voice and these will be heard at the next meeting.

The schools affected by the transfer are as follows: Judy school, Union township; Hugh Stewart school, Union township; Hazel Dell school, Paint township; Larimer school, Paint township and the Oswald school in Marion township.

PRACTICAL HEALTH HINT.

Skin Eruptions.

For the relief of those persistent skin disfigurements arising from some derangement of the stomach and intestinal canal magnesium sulphate (Epsom salt) is a very serviceable medicine. Two teaspoonfuls dissolved in a tumblerful of cold or hot water (as may be preferred) and taken half an hour before breakfast every morning for three or four weeks will restore the skin to its normal smooth condition. Finely pulverized epsom salt (it can be rolled with a rolling pin and made into a dust) makes a valuable dusting powder for a red and swollen surface such as is seen in acne rosacea.

WHEN A SHELL STRIKES.

Fearful Effects of the Fire From a Big Howitzer.

A young officer of the Yorkshire Light Infantry has written to his parents a description of the effects of German artillery fire. He says in part: "I don't believe there is a man living who when first interviewing an eleven inch howitzer shell is not pink with fright. After the first ten one gets quite used to them, but really they are terrible."

"They hit a house. You can see the great shell—a black streak—just before it strikes; then, before you hear the explosion, the whole house simply lifts up into the air, apparently quite silently; then you hear the roar, and the whole earth shakes."

"In the place where the house was there is a huge fountain spout of what looks like pink fluff. It is the pulverized bricks. Then a monstrous shoot of black smoke towering up a hundred feet or more, and finally there is a curious willow-like formation, and then—you duck as huge pieces of shell and house and earth and haystacks tumble over your head. The broken pieces of shell are horribly jagged, sharp edged missiles—whatever they hit they tear, cut, lacerate and destroy."

"Yet, do you know, it is really remarkable how little damage they do against earth trenches. They seem much less destructive in soft sand or soil than when striking against a building or a masonry wall."—London Mail.

ARAB AND TURK.

The Fierce Enmity Between Them Is Both Racial and Political.

Aside from their political differences, the enmity between the Arab and the Turk is proverbial—a racial, deep rooted enmity which the new regime instead of overcoming or, at least, tempering has brought successfully to a head. And still the effendi of Constantinople refers to the son of the desert as "that dog of an Arab," and still the desert Arab, who will rime even on his way to Juhannam, pours out his nature and contempt in couplets like this:

Three things naught but evil work—
The locust, the vermin and the Turk.

There is such a thing as the fatality of hate, which seems to be a part of the cosmic scheme. Indeed, some people are born to hate each other and the sooner they know it the better. The Young Turk, for instance, when he can neither knife nor poison nor despoil an Arab aspiring to power, will invite him to Stamboul and make him a pasha—that is, a sublime porte instrument of murder and plunder.

That is why the Arab chiefs as well as the leaders of thought in Syria and Egypt have always resisted these baleful seductions, for to the Arab, whose pride and magnanimity are those of the barbarian, the patriarchal rule of Ibn ur-Rashid of Nejd or the theocratic government of the sheriff of Mecca, with all its open air tyranny and justice, is far better than the statistocratic abominations of Constantinople. —Ameen Rihani in World's Work.

Olympic Games of 1916.

Those interested in athletics feel that the 1916 Olympic games, which were to be held in Berlin, are not likely to be held there or anywhere else. The countries of Europe, even if the war should end soon, have suffered such awful losses of men and money, and business and sport have been so interrupted, that the public will have little heart for such games as Stockholm knew in 1912 and London in 1908. And for the United States to hold the games here and win them in such circumstances would be a barren victory.—Youth's Companion.

There were four bridesmaids and the maid of honor, Miss Gladys Turpin, of Washington C. H.; Miss Mary Meyers, of Brooklyn, N. Y.; Miss Dorothy Schweitzer, Miss Mary McLean and Miss Clara Sherman. All the maids wore white satin, trimmed with shadow lace and carried pink sweet peas.

SUDDEN HEART ATTACK RESULTS FATALLY

The sudden death of Mrs. E. L. Mendenhall (nee Gertrude Lawwill) wife of Supt. Mendenhall of the Toulon, Ill., public schools, at the Hodgson hospital, Sunday morning, came as a shock to many friends in this city. Mrs. Mendenhall's former home, and arouses the utmost sympathy and regret.

Following a holiday visit with her family in Springfield, Mrs. Mendenhall entered the Hodgson hospital two weeks ago to undergo an operation of a very serious nature, from which she made such rapid recovery that she anticipated returning home this week.

Entirely without premonition came a sudden attack of heart failure resulting in immediate death.

The body was taken to the Klever undertaking parlors on Market street and funeral services will be held Tuesday afternoon at 1:30 at the Presbyterian church. Friends are welcome to call at the undertaking parlors.

The deceased was the daughter of Mrs. Jennie Lawwill, now a resident of Springfield, and grew up in this city one of the brightest girls in the class of 1893 of the Washington High school. Her death is the first break in the class, six of whom are still residing in Washington. They are, Mrs. May Cockerill McLean, Mrs. Fuller Hess, Mrs. Fred Schmid, Miss Alice Perdue, Messrs. Orme Brown and Clayborn Coffman.

Supt. Mendenhall formerly filled the office of superintendent of the public schools of this city and it was then that the courtship began which resulted in his marriage to Miss Lawwill. Mr. Mendenhall was unable to reach here until Monday afternoon, Mrs. Lawwill and daughters, Mrs. Odd Ott and Mrs. H. G. Root coming over from Springfield at the same time.

The two brothers, Messrs. Harry and Earl Lawwill arrived from their homes in Springfield and Columbus Sunday evening.

The shock of Mrs. Mendenhall's death to the husband and family was overwhelming and they have the sympathy of the community.

MEETINGS END AT GRACE M. E. CHURCH

The series of evangelistic meetings at Grace church came to a close Sunday night, after an interesting service largely attended, regardless of the very disagreeable weather Sunday evening.

During the revival a number of persons responded to the invitation to begin a new life, and next Sunday morning, at the regular preaching hour, a class of 40 to 50 will be received into the church, quite a number of the class being by church letter.

Baptismal services also will be held, next Sunday morning, and quite a number will be in the class receiving such ceremonies.

SPECIAL MEETINGS OPEN TONIGHT

Rev. Mott R. Sawyer, D. D., pastor of the Avondale Presbyterian church of Cincinnati, delivers the first sermon of the special meetings, which open tonight in the Presbyterian church.

A FRIENDLY VISIT.

Why the New Resident Called Upon His Neighbor.

Congressman James C. Cantrill of Kentucky was reminded of a story the other evening when reference was made to the way in which Bertha bangs the piano. Some time since, he said, sweet sixteen sat down at the piano in a pretty little suburban home and started to bat at the keys. That was 8 o'clock. At 8:30 she was still on the job. The same at 9. At 10 a man who had just moved into the neighborhood came over and gently pushed the buzz button.

"I heard your daughter playing," explained the new neighbor as girl's papa came to the door, "and I thought I would drop in for a minute or two."

"Fine, fine!" enthusiastically cried girl's papa, trying to haul the new neighbor into the house. "Glad you did! So you are fond of music, eh?"

"Not exactly that," responded the new neighbor, peering into the parlor. "In this particular case I had an irresistible desire to see the person who was possessed of such a wonderful power of endurance."—Philadelphia Telegraph.

SECOND EPISODE.

In Pursuit of the Runaway Bride

CHAPTER I.

THE runaway bride, who led the chase, seemed to be lucky, for the traffic opened before her like magic and closed behind her like a wall. As she turned into Central park at Fifty-ninth street, safe from immediate pursuit, the black Vandyked man's car was in a snarl at Fifth-sixth. As he came out of that pocket he leaned forward, after a look ahead, and spoke crisply to his driver. They stopped at the Plaza hotel, and the man, hurrying up the steps, suddenly paused. With a smile he drew from his pocket a tiny gold watch and opened it. Inside the lid was the picture of a beautiful young girl with a handsome collar. The black Vandyked man gazed at the picture for a moment in frowning meditation. It was the runaway bride.

As he entered the hotel Ned's taxi, with the fluttering white ribbons, passed and turned into the park just as June Warner turned out of it at Seventy-second street, heading for Riverside drive.

At that hour Iris Blethering sat pouring her voluble sadness into the ears of Bobbie in the Blethering home on Riverside drive. She had been school day chum and the bosom friend of June Moore, but now there was no June Moore, only a June Warner, and June Warner might become a stranger. "Rot," observed Bobbie. "How long are they going to be gone?" "Three weeks. It's an eternity, Bobbie!" "Rot," said Bobbie. "Why doesn't somebody answer that doorbell?" It had only just rung, and immediately the hollow Blethering butler came through. He did not return to announce any one, however. Instead the caller rushed straight in and threw herself into the arms of Iris.

Bobbie Blethering stood by and watched the tableau for a moment; then he went to the door and looked out.

"Where's Ned?" he quite naturally inquired.

The only answer was a sob.

"June," pleaded Iris, "where's Ned?"

"I—I left Ned!" June wailed. "I ran away!"

"Aw, I say!" protested Bobbie.

"What did he do, dear?" This from Iris.

"He—he gave me money!"

"He gave you money?" Iris repeated a dollar in his nice, cheery way; then he turned around and gave me $30—in just the same way! Don't you see?" And she shuddered with the recollection of her humiliation. "Then I had a dream," went on June, with more vigor, bound now to make them understand. "I saw myself being paid for being a wife, as mummy pays the servants and Ned pays his stenographer. I saw Ned giving me money as he gives it to beggars! I saw myself always holding out my hand for charity!" And she was a most pathetic little figure as she upturned her palm. "I couldn't stand it. So I threw down the $30 and slipped off the train and came back."

"But you had no money!" said Iris. "I got on the train anyhow and sold my watch to a funny old lady," June explained. She paused to remember something—the black Vandyked man who now had her watch. He had bought it from the old lady on the train, so that June could some day redeem it. That was very nice of him.

He Caught Up the Portrait and Pressed it to His Lips.

She had his card and was reaching for it when she noticed that Iris had gone to the telephone.

"You mustn't telephone anybody!" the runaway bride insisted. "You would be betraying my confidence."

"But what do you intend to do?"

"What about Ned?" Bobbie suddenly blurted, the thought of young Warner, alone on the train with the honeymoon luggage, flashing on his mind.

"Ned's a darling!" And June's lip quivered. "He's an angel! But I can't be a burden to be carried on Ned's back. I shall stay away from Ned until I achieve my own independence. Then we can walk together hand in hand—in mutual self respect and accepting from each other nothing but love!"

"It is for his happiness as well as for mine," June insisted firmly. "The world will not be happy until women walk in strict equality with men, Iris, dear." She saw by the face of her friend that cold logic was wasted. The two girls walked upstairs, and Iris ushered her still bosom friend into a cozy little guest room.

Meanwhile Ned Warner began to be familiar with the bronze panther on the overhanging rock in the park and, casting back in his memory, reflected that he must have passed it about five times.

But why had June married him? Why had she walked down the aisle of the Brynport chapel with him that morning? Perhaps the black Vandyked man was married, and marriage was the only road to June's freedom.

He could stand this train of thoughts no longer. He whirled up Riverside drive, past the very house where June was then talking to Iris and turned his key in the lock of the place which was to have been home. Home! And this was his return! Here were all the furnishings which they had bought together. Here had clustered all his dreams of happiness.

It must be his task to find that man! June was still June—and his June! He caught up the portrait and pressed it to his lips and held it in his arms and sank down by the bed sobbing.

At that moment June and Iris were sitting in the big walnut paneled library, and Bobbie wandered in. When he saw the girls he started back.

"Don't go, Bobbie!" called Iris. She walked straight up to him and held out her hand. "Produce!"

"What's the price?" he asked.

"Oh, a hundred."

"How did you guess my roll?" inquired the cheerful Bobbie, dragging up a handful of bills with nonchalant ease, at which June smiled in spite of her embarrassment. She had always been amused at the matter of fact and open way in which these two discussed finances. Bobbie counted his money and held back a fragment of it.

"Here's your hundred, and I'm seven to the good."

"Oh!" gasped June as the significance of the tableau suddenly dawned upon her. Why, they were almost in the same position in which she had seen herself when she was Ned's piteous little beggar.

"Thanks, Bobbie," said Iris and turned to June. "If you want more, honey, in your struggle for independence, come right back, and I'll make Bobbie give it to us."

June shrank away. "Oh, I can't possibly take it! I didn't know you were going to ask Bobbie!"

"Where else do I get it?" blurted the bosom friend. "Bobbie's the easiest way."

"That's just it," June pointed out. "Can't you see what a beggar a dependent woman is? Don't you see that if I can't accept a gift of money from my husband I can't possibly let you accept for me a gift of money from your husband? Don't be angry, Iris, please. I'm fighting for a principle."

"Oh, Mr. Thomas Rot!" exploded Bobbie.

"That attitude is at the bottom of the whole thing, Bobbie," argued June, with spirit. "Because the man has supported the woman for ages he has made himself the master. That destroys the woman's self respect, and love dies."

"She's a fine kid," said Bobbie heartily, "but if she's going to draw the line on money which has been handed from a man to a woman she'll have to get it fresh from the mint."

"What will you do, June?" fretted Iris.

"If I only had that purse mummy gave me," mused June.

"She got that from your father," Bobbie was unkind enough to remind her.

"Oh, that was daddy's money," she brightly replied, no trace of concern on her brow, "and it's the last I can take from them now that I'm married. Iris, couldn't you go out to the house and say you'll send it to me?"

"Just the thing!" Iris was bubbling immediately with enthusiasm. "We'll go right out now. Bobbie, call the car."

"You mustn't let them know I'm here," warned June. "You mustn't let any one know!"

Within five minutes Iris and Bobbie in the swift little runabout were headed for Brynport. In the library June had found a picture of Ned among some other intimate photographs, and it was with constant reference to this and amid constant talking to it and constant caressing of it that she penned her important message:

My Poor, Dear Boy—I cannot explain in a letter what happened today. When I am free, dear Ned, I will make you understand and forgive. You must not try to find your unhappy bride, JUNE.

CHAPTER II.

AUNT DEBBY came around the corner of the Moore house in all her glory—stiff lavender dress with the red posies on it, yellow hat with the green feather, tan shoes and blue stockings.

"Howdy, Aunt Debby!" Bobbie Blethering, with his chattel beside him, swung up the drive in his fast little runabout.

June's parents came to the door, John J. Moore in the blue and tan smoking jacket which he had refused to wear until tenderness at June's approaching departure had brought him to it, and Charlotte Moore in the gray silk dress embroidered by June's own hands.

"Come right in," heartily invited Father Moore, and Mother Moore, with soft eyes, shook Bobbie by one hand and Iris by both.

"We have only a minute to stay," began Iris, starting to talk as they went into the library. "I heard from June," Iris rattled on. Father Moore, in the parlor, came straight over.

"She missed her purse," glibly went on Iris, while Bobbie eyed her with admiration. "She's afraid she lost it. Did she leave it here?"

"Right on that table," And Mrs. Moore's eyes sparkled. She took it from a drawer in a desk.

"That girl always was careless about money," laughed Mr. Moore as if it were a virtue.

Bobbie glanced at Iris. She was as serene as a plate of ice cream.

"I'll send it to her," offered Iris, and Mrs. Moore smilingly put it in her hand.

"Why didn't June wire us?" puzzled Father, his fists bulging in the pockets of his gay smoking jacket.

"Yes, why didn't she?" Mother's voice was full of anxiety, but as she saw the untruffled expression of Iris Blethering's face she began to bridle. If June could wire her friend, why couldn't she wire her mother?

"You have such slow delivery out here," promptly explained Iris.

"Just what did she say?" Iris cast her eyes to the ceiling and began telling off the words on her fingers.

"Phone mother I can't find my purse. Did I forget it? Extremely happy. Bushels of love to all. June."

Twenty minutes were all the callers could spare. They drove down the boulevard. A taxicab flashed by them, but they did not notice it. Ned Warner was in the taxi, and he was out and up on the porch before the machine had come to a full stop. John Moore answered the bell, and he stood as if petrified when he saw his son-in-law's expression.

"Have you heard from June?" husked Ned.

"Isn't she with you?" The voice of Moore was strained and tense.

Mrs. Moore came hurrying out, her face ashen.

"June!" she cried. She ran down to the taxi and peered in through the open window. She came running back and caught Ned by the arm. "Where is my girl?"

"Then she isn't here?" gasped Ned.

"Come inside." John Moore's voice had lost all its color. He led the way into the library. "Now, what is all this about? Why are you here alone?"

"I don't know. June is somewhere in New York. I was in hopes you had heard from her."

"We did! She telegraphed to Iris that she had lost her purse. Iris left here with it to mail it to June."

"Then that's where she is!" There was relief in Ned's voice.

"Sit down," said Moore. "Why are you not with her?"

"I don't know." There was a choke in Ned's voice. "She left me on the train—slipped away at Farnville."

"She wouldn't do such a thing without good cause!" declared Mrs. Moore with firm conviction.

"What happened?" This sharply from Moore.

"I don't understand. She told me she lost her purse. I gave her some money, and she went to sleep with her head on my shoulder. I pilloved her more comfortably on the seat by and by and went into the smoker. I dropped in to look at her about every five minutes, and when I came back after we had passed Farnville she was gone. She left the money on the seat. Here it is." And he showed them the three crumpled bills, one partly torn.

"How do you know she returned to New York?" demanded Moore.

"I saw her. I got off at the next station and telephoned. The station master at Farnville reported that he saw her getting on a down train. I took an express and overhauled her as we came into the Grand Central station. I saw her leave the station and get into a taxi."

"You are holding something back!" Moore charged. "I want to know the truth!"

"You have all I can tell you," declared Ned. He would not tell them about the black Vandyked man, and June was Mrs. Warner now.

"Will you get your wraps, please, Charlotte?" June's father finally said, and rose. "We are going to Iris. I'll order the car."

They were grim and silent as they sped away.

While they rode the black Vandyked man, in Sherry's, sat at the end of a long table between a jovial host with a gray mustache and a ponderous man with heavily lidded eyes and short hair.

There were a dozen placed at the table, and wine hissed at every plate, but the others of the party, which included a half dozen vivacious and gaily gownned young women, were dancing. The three men talked in low tones, their heads bent together, and the black Vandyked man was the most silent. Finally he began to talk and grew enthusiastic, and presently he drew forth June's little gold watch. Then he flashed open the lid. All three men bent eagerly over it. They gazed upon the lovely features of the runaway bride, their faces bent close together. They clapped the black Vandyked man on the shoulder.

It was during this time that June Warner, sitting quietly in a corner of the library with Bobbie and Iris and with her mother's purse still in her hand, heard a familiar voice in the vestibule.

"Daddy!" She dashed from her chair in a flash and went upstairs to her room.

"Where's June?" Mrs. Moore had pushed through ahead of the men.

John Moore walked straight to Bobbie Blethering and shook an awe inspiring finger at that young man.

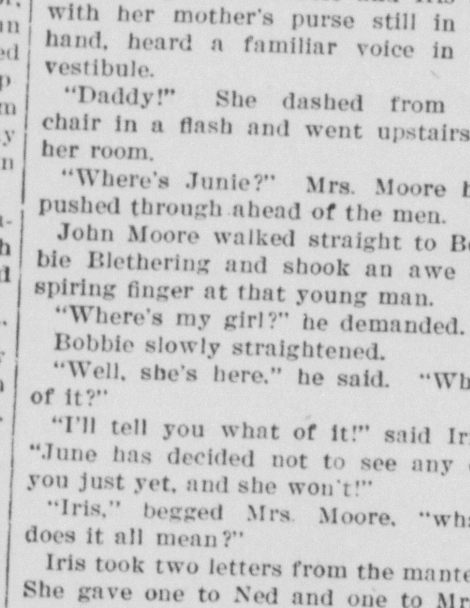

"Where's my girl?" he demanded. Bobbie slowly straightened.

"Well, she's here," he said. "What of it?"

"I'll tell you what of it!" said Iris. "June has decided not to see any of you just yet, and she won't!"

"Iris," begged Mrs. Moore, "what does it all mean?"

Iris took two letters from the mantel. She gave one to Ned and one to Mrs.

"Why are you here alone?"

Moore. Her husband looked over her shoulder. The letter was addressed to—

Dear Daddy and Mummy—I cannot explain in a letter why I was compelled to leave Ned. Some day I will make you understand and forgive. Please be good to dear Ned and love.

YOUR LITTLE JUNE.

"Here's the man!" shouted Ned, his voice full of sudden fury. He held a pair of gloves in one hand and a card in the other. "These are June's gloves. They were lying on the table, and this card was in them!"

"They're my gloves!" called Iris, but Ned laughed at her. There was no mistaking those dainty, blue embroidered bits of white kid.

"Now, I'll tell you," went on Ned. "This man, Gilbert Blye, whose name I now know for the first time, was with her from the moment she left me until she came here. He is a tall, black Vandyked man, and at Farnville he was seen assisting June on the down train. I saw them myself through the car window talking together. I want to find Gilbert Blye! Are you hiding him too?" And he turned savagely on Iris.

Bobbie lunged forward. "That'll do, Ned," he warned. "Iris, call June."

"June!" They heard Iris throwing doors open and running through the house, calling June. Ned darted up the stairs, but in the hall Iris met him with a frightened face. "She is gone!"

They all searched for her then, but there was no trace of her.

CHAPTER III.

MRS. GILBERT BLYE was in shrill voiced converse with a big green parrot, which, from length and sharpness of nose and height of eye arches, might have been a sister to her. A maid announced that some one had wanted to see Mr. Blye, and, since he was not at home, would Mrs. Blye care to say where he was? He came to New York on an early train.

Mrs. Blye rose instantly. She sailed straight into the hall and confronted the five earnest visitors. "Did you say Mr. Blye returned on an early train?"

"Yes," Ned tried not to speak curtly. "I saw him."

"I am Mrs. Blye. Is there anything I can do for you?" The lady was studying the group with a shrewlike penetration. Mrs. Blye began to worry herself. Also she began to suspect. That last was her specialty. "If you will tell me the nature of your business with Mr. Blye I may be able to locate him."

"I want my daughter!" blurted out John Moore, his lips squaring.

"Oh!" And Mrs. Blye's voice rose. "Your daughter!" She glared at them for a moment. "Will you please wait?" she asked and sailed back through the hall. They could hear her sharp voice telephoning. She had called her husband's club, and they heard her exclaim indignantly, "Where, Sherry's?" She was back, blazing. She had her hat in her hand. "He's at Sherry's!" she shrilled.

An electric coupe stood at the door. She slammed into that, turned on the lights and rolled away with as much vigor as was in the capacity of her machine. Bobbie's runabout darted after her and passed her and then came the limousine with Mr. and Mrs. Moore and Ned.

Poor June! It had been hard for her to leave those beloved voices down there in the library, but she had made up her mind very firmly that neither she nor Ned could be happy if she was always to feel that she was a chattel. She ran back to the desk for Ned's photograph, then stepped lightly out on the tiny side porch, jumped down to the little embankment and fled, as light as a thistle-down, along the side of the house and out at the little grocer's gate.

Where now should she go? The apartments, their home, hers and Ned's! She hurried up in that direction, but at the first corner she stopped for an instant and darted over toward Broadway. She had realized three things almost simultaneously—first, that they might come out of the Blethering house at any instant and see her; second, that she had no key and, third, that Ned might come there. It would be the most likely place for him to go in his loneliness.

In fond memory, stopping at the first dark corner, she went over each of the dear rooms, furnished just to fit her and delight her—the white and gold reception room, the white and rose drawing room, the white and black library, the white and blue bedroom, the all white kitchen. She saw Ned in every room and herself there. Now flushed and happy she was experimenting with the toy range, now they were dining together all alone. She was playfully feeding Ned, and he was seasoning the meal with stolen kisses, walking clear around the table to get them. They were spending an evening of blissful companionship in the library.

She suddenly held her handkerchief to her mouth to choke back a sob. On Broadway she hailed a passing taxi.

All was sparkling at Sherry's, but Gilbert Blye had taken small share in the hilarity. He had risen to go when a black eyed young woman, the most vivacious of the party, called him to task for his evening of secret scheming. "You're up to some devilment," she charged, playfully tweaking his beard. "Come and dance with me!"

"Sorry, Tommy," he told her, with that queer smile on his lips, "but I've a previous engagement."

"She can wait," pouted the girl. She dragged Blye away from the table.

"Take my car, Gil!" called the gray mustached host.

"Certainly," replied Blye, and the three men exchanged a smile. "I'll dance one round with Tommy; then I'll go."

Before that round was over, however, Gilbert Blye saw an apparition in the doorway, and his face turned cold. The apparition was a tall, angular woman with a long, high nose and high arched brows, who was trying to bore Gilbert Blye through and through with a double eyed glare of burning ferocity. He hurried over to his wife. She had shrilled:

"Who is that woman?" One lean, long finger pointed accusingly at the vivacious black eyed girl with whom Gil had been dancing.

"I shall explain nothing," said Gilbert. "I'm through!"

He left her contemptuously, leaving her stunned by this unexpected revolt. As he went down the steps he heard her shrieking something after him, and he hurried. As he dashed out of the door he ran into a group who were coming in. They were the Moores, the Bletherings and Ned Warner, and he was upon them and past them and jumping into the luxuriously furnished racing limousine, with the little station in his hand, before they realized that this was the man they were seeking.

"There he goes!" cried Ned. "The scoundrel!"

Blye, moving rapidly away, saw the confusion and blamed his wife for the scene, for now she was in the lead of the excited group, which was rushing toward him.

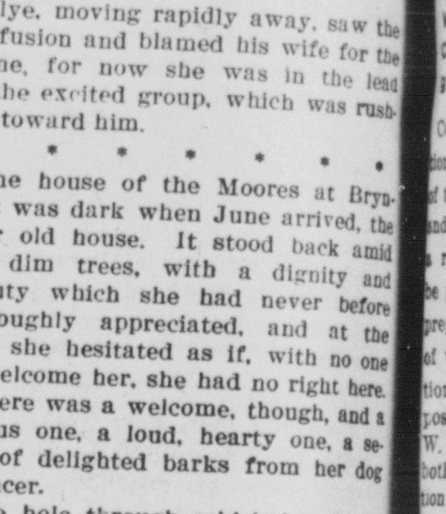

The house of the Moores at Brynport was dark when June arrived, the dear old house. It stood back amid the dim trees, with a dignity and beauty which she had never before thoroughly appreciated, and at the gate she hesitated as if, with no one to welcome her, she had no right here.

There was a welcome, though, and a joyous one, a loud, hearty one, a series of delighted barks from her dog Bouncer.

The hole through which he usually emerged had been found and closed, but he wasted no time on that. He merely came through the window, bringing a part of the sash with him, and here he was running circles around her, leaping at her, crouching, barking at the top of his voice, doing everything in his power to show her that she was a welcome visitor at this place and in his heart at any hour of the night or day.

He had known her very presence from far back in the shed.

It was the work of a minute for June to clamber through an unlocked kitchen en window and to rush upstairs, get her maid, Marie, seize several garments and drag with her the astounded servant.

Where Now Should She Go?

"Miss June! Miss June!" cried Aunt Debby, out of breath from running, but June only waved a hand at her as the taxi swept out of the drive.

A limousine had stopped in front of the house, and a black Vandyked man had alighted.

"Miss Moore!" he called, but June's taxi rattled on. He jumped in his own car and gave the word and started in swift pursuit.

The two machines were still in sight when the runabout of Bobbie and Iris dashed around the circle.

"Is June here?" called Iris.

"Lawdy, no!" puffed Aunt Debby. "Dat's her goin' yonder!"

The runabout was gone with a whizz, and immediately after came the family limousine.

"Is June here?" called all three of the occupants at once.

"She's just done gone! The gentleman with black whiskers has just done gone! Mr. Bobbie and Miss Iris has just done gone! Whooh!"

Around the corner there rolled an electric coupe. It was brilliantly lighted, and in it sat an angular woman with a high, long nose and high arched brows, beneath which glittered two sharp eyes.

"Say!" shrilled the occupant of the electric.

Aunt Debby, her broad hand on her stomach, pointed down the road.

The Black Vandyked Man.

this numbly after awhile. "Did you say he gave you money?"

"Yes," June straightened up as she recognized the difficulty which lay before her. Iris, while a warm and loyal friend, was not exactly a thoughtful person nor a sensitive one and might perhaps not understand the deep ethical significance of what had happened. Bobbie didn't count.

"Just after the wedding breakfast mother gave me a purse, and if I had not left that on the library table at home I might not have known my predicament until it was too late. When Ned and I were on the train, however, I missed the purse. While I was telling Ned about it he tipped the porter and caught Ned by the arm. "Where is my girl?"

"Then she isn't here?" gasped Ned.

"Come inside." John Moore's voice had lost all its color. He led the way into the library. "Now, what is all this about? Why are you here alone?"

"I don't know. June is somewhere in New York. I was in hopes you had heard from her."

"We did! She telegraphed to Iris that she had lost her purse. Iris left here with it to mail it to June."

"Then that's where she is!" There was relief in Ned's voice.

"Sit down," said Moore. "Why are you not with her?"

"I don't know." There was a choke in Ned's voice. "She left me on the train—slipped away at Farnville."

Bill Abolishes Annual and Quadrennial Registration.

SAFEGUARDS AGAINST FRAUD

Modification of Election Statutes In Preparation and Will Soon Be Submitted to the General Assembly. War Veterans Seek Amendment to Civil Service Measure — Extravagance Probe Starts.

Columbus, Feb. 1.—Under the direction of Senator Wickline, chairman of the senate committee on elections, and of Secretary of State Hildebrandt, the recodification of election laws, to be presented to the legislature, is in preparation by George H. Schaaf, clerk of the Stark county board of elections. It will likely include the proposal of State Committeeman Peter W. Durr of Cincinnati for abolishing both annual and quadrennial registration of voters, substituting therefor permanent registration by card of every voter in the state.

Now that referendum proposals must be sent to each voter in the state, the need of a complete mailing list of the Ohio electorate is manifest. The Durr plan, which has been drawn in the shape of a bill, appears to have ample safeguards against fraud. It provides for registration in every precinct in the state May 19-24, inclusive, 1915. On a card is written the usual registration data, including the voter's occupation and a physical description. The cards are to be sent to the board of elections in forty-eight hours, the board to keep duplicate set of cards, arranged numerically and to enter the names in a loose leaf record, in alphabetical order.

The mark on a card of an illiterate voter must be sworn to by him and attested by two witnesses who are residents of the county. When he votes he must be identified by two election judges or two citizens. "Any person who is registered and fails to vote at two consecutive elections thereby forfeits his right to vote until again registered."

Duty of Election Board. It is made the duty of the election board to remove from the files the registration card of any elector whom they know to have died, who has forfeited his registration or has lost his right to vote by removal from the county or "otherwise."

Before Sept. 15 the clerk of the board is to prepare a list of voters, and fifteen days before election a supplemental list, copies to be furnished political committees and committees backing each candidate nominated by petition. A complete list of registrations before each November election is to be bound in volume and kept at the board offices. Distressing Bronchial Coughs "Hang On" and Weaken.

Foley's Honey and Tar easily raises the phlegm and heals the raw inflamed surfaces.

That tight feeling over your chest, and distressing bronchial cough are usually worse at night, when you lose the sleep you sorely need to keep up your strength. Foley's Honey and Tar eases that tight feeling and leaves a healing coating as it soothes down the throat. The tickling, rasping cough and hoarseness disappear, and the phlegm is raised easily and copiously. There is more healing in one bottle of Foley's Honey and Tar Compound than in a medicine of any other cough and cold remedy. It beats the last drop. W. J. BELLMAN, Clarksburg, Ky., writes: "My boy, 16 years old, had bronchial trouble ever since he was a baby. We feared he would never grow. Foley's Honey and Tar Compound effected a cure, and bought a bottle. One soon commenced to improve after the stubborn cough. Foley's Honey and Tar has given better satisfaction than any medicine I ever used. I think this wonderful medicine has saved the boy's life."

You save money when you buy FOLEY'S Honey and Tar Compound, because just a few drops stop the cough and cold, one bottle lasts a long time, and the last dose is as good as the first. Refuse substitutes.  EVERY USER IS A FRIEND. Blackmer & Tanquary.

AT THE HISTORIC CHATEAU DE MONDEMENT.

Photo by American Press Association. This estate, near the river Aisne, was often visited by Napoleon. It was taken and retaken by French and Germans several times. The cut shows a wall demolished by shell fire.

At a general meeting of civil war veterans, United Spanish War Veterans and Sons of Veterans at Memorial hall, a committee was appointed to draft an amendment to the civil service measure which has been introduced in the legislature, making civil war veterans eligible for positions under the law.

The "extravagance" probe to be made by joint committee, of which Senator Howard of Belmont is chairman, was started today. Former State Budget Commissioner Heffernan was the first witness to be examined.

VILLA NOT DEAD WIRES CAROTHERS

Mexican Chief Reported Shot By Colonel Fierro.

Washington, Feb. 1.—The state department received from George C. Carothers, its agent with Villa, a dispatch announcing that rumors regarding the death of Villa were untrue. Carothers is with Villa at Aguascalientes, where the shooting is alleged to have occurred. The report first appeared in a dispatch from Mexico City. The Constitutionalist agency now announces that it had advices from the border stating that not only had Villa been shot, Colonel Fierro, but also that he had subsequently died of his wounds.

Charles A. Douglas, counsel in Washington for the Carranza government, issued a statement explaining Carranza's recent decree annulling all land titles in Mexico issued in contravention of the decree of 1856. This decree provided for the distribution of all community lands among the natives, but was never carried into effect. Under the Diaz regime the lands in question were to a great extent sold, in many cases to foreigners. Mr. Douglas points out that the Carranza decree proposes to readjust the land titles by legal methods, and that judicial machinery is provided whereby a land owner may appeal to the established tribunals if he feels that injustice is done through the execution of the provisions of the decree.

One report regarding the wounding of Villa, which was circulated in El Paso, is that a Mexican named Navarro stabbed the general in the arm as a part of a plot hatched in Mexico City to rid the country of Villa. Whether Rodolfo Fierro, as first reported had it, was connected with the conspiracy, has not been confirmed. It is no longer doubted that Villa was wounded, but Americans generally believe that the wound was not serious.

If a better cough syrup than Foley's Honey and Tar Compound could be found, we would carry it. We know this reliable and dependable medicine has given satisfaction for more than forty years; therefore we never offer a substitute for the genuine. Recommended for coughs, colds, croup, whooping cough, bronchial and lagrippe coughs. No opiates. Blackmer & Tanquary. adv

AT THE PALACE

Carrying the official indorsements of governors, prison commissions, wardens, criminologists and other recognized authorities that have made crime and criminals a study, the Rodney J. Diegle Exposition of Prison Life will be seen at the Palace theatre, matinee and night, Wednesday, February 3. In connection with a most interesting lecture describing all scenes, Mr. Diegle shows the Ohio penitentiary in 4000 feet of actual motion pictures made behind the walls of the prison. Commenting on the entertainment, Gov. Cox says, "My Dear Mr. Diegle, I believe the work in which you are now engaged will have tremendous influence in this state, and I am sure that all persons who believe in bettering the conditions of the unfortunates of our penal institutions will co-operate with you in this matter. The people desire to do the right thing toward the unfortunate members of society, but the trouble has been that they have not been conscious of the many false steps that have been taken in trying to bring about reform. I am sure you are serving humanity in this instance." James M. Cox. adv

DANGERS FROM ICE INCREASE

By Associated Press.

Columbus, O., Feb. 1.—"The situation is what you would call critical," said Prof. J. Warren Smith, of the Columbus Weather Bureau, speaking of the flood probabilities in and near Columbus.

"With the temperature above freezing and rain still falling there is every probability of the ice choking the streams giving away, and going down rivers in gorges which are so much to be feared at this time of year.

"The fact that what breaking up has occurred is reported from the down stream sections, is favorable. Should the ice break up near the source of a river, the result would be more dangerous.

"Our observers are watching all points closely. Unless the rain becomes much heavier during the day, there is little to be feared from the result of increased waters itself. It is the ice in which danger lies.

WEATHER MIXTURE VERY DISAGREEABLE

From sunshine to snow; from snow to rain and slush, with a great deal of fog and other ingredients to make the weather disagreeable and distasteful generally.

This has been the program carried out by the weather man for the past two or three days, and now the weather man is promising more rain, followed by snow and colder weather.

Since Saturday night the streets and sidewalks have been filled with slush—with the exception of a few places where the accumulated snow and ice has been removed—and pedestrians have found walking exceptionally disagreeable.

The city officials are endeavoring to have local citizens obey the ordinance requiring the cleaning of sidewalks, without the necessity of enforcing the penalty provided by the law. However, a few examples may be made to bring about the required results.

The melting snow and rain has caused the streams to become swollen to some extent, but no flood stage is anticipated.

LEAPS TO DEATH AT CHILLICOTHE

Chillicothe, O., February 1.—

Charles Ward, section employee on the N. & W. was probably fatally injured this afternoon when he leaped from a gasoline truck to save himself from an approaching freight which had been hidden by the fog.

His skull was crushed on a cross-tie, and he was removed to the hospital where death is expected at any moment.

Several other employees who were on the truck escaped injury.

Keep Ponies In Ice Stables.

A Danish explorer who has just returned from a journey across the inland ice of Greenland made use of Icelandic ponies, which he found to be well adapted to arctic travel. When stops were made the horses were sheltered in holes cut in the ice. These ice stalls were quite comfortable and in severe weather were covered with tarpaulins to keep out snow and wind. The small horses gave a good account of themselves and will doubtless be used extensively in future arctic expeditions.—Popular Mechanics.

Torpedo Nets.

Under the direction of Commander John K. Robison, U. S. N., commanding the naval torpedo station at Newport, R. I., a test was recently made which seems to prove that the torpedo net is no longer a secure defense against the torpedo. In the experiment a torpedo with a heavy charge of gun cotton was fired from the torpedo boat Morris while she was running at eighteen knots at a steel net which was moored to protect the target. The torpedo went through the net, struck the target and exploded.
